FORDHAM UNIVERSITY

REV. LAURENCE MACFARLAN, S.J.
President

FORDHAM University is one of the nation's largest Catholic educational institutions. The University began at St. John's College, Fordham, on June 18, 1863. At that time, the new great University, was concentrated around Rose Hill Manor, but today Fordham's unique academic facilities are on Rose Hill, while the large Business and Law schools are located at 202 Broadway.

Rose Hill Manor was purchased by Bishop John Hughes in 1859 for a seminary for his diocese but arrangements for a college independent of the seminary were made at the same time and the first classes were held in September, 1863, with six students. The school developed slowly, but in 1883 new structures, the present New Memorial chapel and St. John's Hall, were built.

The location came to Fordham in 1886 after the college had been elevated to university status by the State Legislature. The first of major three areas of Fordham were the Roseland Heights Campus. Under the direction of these men, the University with its general departments has grown immensely until today there are over 15,000 registered students.

In 1906, the university name was changed to Fordham University, the college department retaining the old name, St. John's, until 1953. During the past decade the school has increased most remarkably. New buildings have been erected and there is a loud hope that a new medical school will be opened in the not far distant future.

TOUCHDOWN: Doheny to Pfeifer

BY DON REIDERS

Instructor of Physical Education, Portland University

THE Rams have been moving rather well this season and, in the main, it has been a team effort. Although the team has won four of its five games, public attention has been partially centered on the activities of Dick Doheny and Al Pfeifer. These two players from New Jersey are Portland's more well-known combination.

The more than one occasion they have kept the Rams' score from slipping beneath water level. Much has been written and said of this outstanding passing duo, but nothing can compare with the cold statistics to prove, on their value to Portland. Dick and Al have turned an excellent punch with few equals since their freshman days in 1942.

Take Doheny, for instance. He now has appeared in twenty-two varsity games since 1945. In that period, he has completed 187 passes out of 327 attempts for 1,233 yards and twenty-nine touchdowns. His three-year completion average is an amazing 57.4%. That performance has lifted Dick to the top rank of college players, but the one statistic that makes him the top plus, above is the one that shows that he has had only eleven games interrupted by his regular injuries.

Dick is much to Doheny's admiration, even though it hurts the eye. It is all, of course, partly due to his own play, occasional injuries. But it is also due to the advice of coach Ed Denevold. When Ed was playing under these three with the Giants, he was constantly reminded to "cut and run the ball" rather than throw it away carelessly.

Ed is aware that many people are not convinced seeing Doheny take two good fifteen-yard passes means much for a football, but he knows he is right.

"The way football is played now," Denevold said, "it is even important to keep themselves as long as you can. If a player is thrown for a big loss, I am not happy, but I would rather see that than have him put those full away with the risk of losing possession. You can cut that running back a bit earlier than you can get the ball back. So what you wish, Doheny will continue to take losses and I think it is the right thing."

If the Rams are successful in keeping Doheny on his feet, you can guess why Dick will be looking for a downhill. It will be most often when Al Pfeifer, the full end, whose regular duties usually hang on to anything thrown to, over, or about them, Dick moved on a variety team (just as impressive as Doheny's passing work). In fact, Pfeifer accumulated a new all-time Doheny pass catching record last season with 55 catches.

DICK DOHENY and AL PFEIFER

In the twenty-two appearances with the Rams, Pfeifer has caught 92 passes for 1,136 yards and eleven touchdowns. Al's greatest individual effort occurred this season in Portland's 27-20 victory over West Virginia. The last afternoon in Morgantown, too, Pfeifer caught ten passes for 227 yards and two scores. His combination that day had twelve players and spectators blinking their eyes in disbelief.

Pfeifer is more than a pass catcher. He is an excellent blocker and, prior to the "two-platoon" era, was an all-state tackle. Pfeifer's unusual, long stride looks people to believe that he is slow. While he is not necessarily fast by any means, Al does not get into the open unopposed by inserting in the use of a pump stick.

As effective as this combination has been, Denevold would like to see Doheny pass more to other receivers. Two weeks ago, for example, San Francisco's Cliff Hutton did a great job running Doheny and Portland's attack apart. The other day when the chips were down, the game-winning pass went to Mike Wright. On that play Pfeifer was also in the line, but Dick knew that Hutton would be too heavily guarded. The more Dick throws to other receivers, the better it will be for Pfeifer, for the simple reason that the opposition will no longer be able to double-team the big full end.

Pfeifer's concentration on passing has made them a crowd-pleasing team this season, but the football game will be more interesting if the ground game improves. The Rams looked like a well-built ship in the closing minutes of the game with San Francisco. They drove along the ground until the Rams' secondary jumped up and then, on a first down, Doheny took the trouble to win the game.

Yes, the Portland team has been doing well this year and the fans are enthusiastic in the feeling that Doheny, as Pfeifer means more touchdowns and more victories. If there is a better passing combination in the nation, it is doubtful if you could convince the players in the Rams.

THE HOYAS ARE TOUGH

BY BOB CORLETT
Assistant Sports Editor, THE HOY

GEORGETOWN has been pined against the eighth-ranked team in the Associated Press football poll twice so far this season. First the Braves faced powerful Maryland. Maryland was the game, but only in the last minutes of the contest. A Georgetown march to the Virginia goal late in the fourth stanza was thwarted, and this march materialized in a score the game would have been won by Georgetown and from here the Hoys took over and scored the deciding touchdowns.

The very next Saturday Maryland lost to South Carolina State, and the reason for the loss, we like to think, was in looking down against the Braves, the weak defense. A few weeks later, the Hoys traveled to Florida to play Miami. This is the team which responded to the last in competition with only the Prokes, comparison of Notre Dame. Miami also had obtained the No. 1 position in the national poll and the general opinion was that Georgetown did not have a prayer against the Hurricanes. But the Hoys, fired by coach Bob Whertha or perhaps the rays of Florida's sunshine, held Miami even for three periods before succumbing to superior numbers, weight and concentration here.

Fastidiously unimpressive with twice this year the Hoys have battled their superior team right down to the final game, almost pulling what would have been one of the season's most stunning upsets in the game against Maryland, and holding the Miami Hurricanes even for three periods of wretched football. Now Georgetown have another contest in which it is playing the part of underdog. Fairbanks has been picked to win this game because the Braves have a great team this year. The Blue Hill team goes into action with a very respectable record of four wins in five games while Georgetown has only earned only one victory in six games. Can the Hoys rise to this occasion and will they be able to take the game from the favored Fairbanks team?

If comparative records were the only criterion the obvious answer to the above question would be that Georgetown will lose the game, and lose it rather decisively. But if you look towards the crowd and see the Georgetown team as it ready to, your answer will have to be that the Hoys have the personnel and the ability to upset the Braves and that there is a good chance that this afternoon's game will conclude with the Hoys on the long end of the score.

Last season and the beginning of this current one Georgetown was ruled as a passing team, with only one real running threat, Billy Green. With the departure of Billy from the Georgetown campus, coach Frank McIlwain has been gifted with three superior running backs, and now he is able to call a much more varied offense. Powered team. Perhaps there more of the line looking, using his 175 pounds to full advantage. Another replacement, Eddie Doyle, is another excellent player. He has really come into his own, getting up almost one hundred yards in the fourth period of the N. C. game. He was lost in the Williams game and can run the Miami game, but he is supposed to be ready today. Still another replacement, Doug Thompson, is coming from the other side, back guard. Once in the next back on the club, weighing only 165 pounds, but his speed and deftness make up for his deficiency in size. If quarterback is Whittingly, it really has game.

Another man to watch is captain Tommy Barthman, 20-year-old senior. He plays defensive safety for the Hoys, and has been outstanding at this position for the past two years. Last year Tommy ranked among the best in the country in pass interceptions. His defensive personality has prompted much comment from opposing coaches and experts. They have been unable to play safety on any team in the country, for it is a college team is professional.

A few games to Frank Whittingly, a spirited young back, told to go along with a young train, and the former fighting spirit of all Georgetown teams—this is what makes the Braves confident in today's game against the Fairbanks team. A little wonder of the 15 to 0 defeat at the hands of the Braves last year might have something to do with Georgetown's desire to win this one, but no matter what the outcome, Georgetown knows it can win, and is determined to have the field this afternoon in the role of victor.

Richard DeRubeis—Probably the last player in Fordham's history, DeRubeis led the country in his specialty with a magnificent performance of 53.3. His own eye scoring record is a substantial 225.7. The also scored's right arm from a young kind of the founder of the Blue's football tradition. DeRubeis is a steady, light and nimble, and capable field general, with a strong, well-placed, accurate, and consistent throw. He was graduated from St. Cecilia's High School, Englewood, N. J.

Edgar Kunkel—He is the top offensive center on the squad. He is an agile and agile blocker as well as the team's center player. He has been consistently averaging 30 yards in his placement. A former Catholic academy, and an honor student. He leads the team in the back zone in the spring. His leader believes that Kunkel will give his team more strength in spring than any previous line center. He can also block up the line in comparison. He was graduated from Warren Harding High School in Bridgeport.

George Appell—George is one of the toughest players on the squad. In St. Joe, Indiana, at St. Joseph's, he has been the high school star. He has been selected to spring with his brother up in the Blue's football position. He will be playing right a first year this autumn to prove to Kunkel that he is the leader in the fall game. He can also block up the line in comparison. He was graduated from Warren Harding High School in Bridgeport.

William Thomas—Thomas has reached the point, in his first year, where his performance stands out as the best offensive tackle on the team. The New York captain from Fordham Prep has a strong line blocking, and a strong line in his performance and (and) ability. He has been the best player in the line in his first year. He is a strong and offensive blocker on the line. He should have about enough to be the right side.

James Martin—His career offensive tackle was built out of spring practice. He is a strong player, and he will be the best on the line. He is a strong and offensive blocker on the line. He should have about enough to be the right side.

MEMORIAL CIGARETTE COMPANY, NEW YORK, N. Y.

Lighten a pack of Chesterfields and you'll see it.

B

High quality and better tobacco smoke. No other cigarette has it.

C

It's milder, smoother and gives what every cigarette lover wishes. Not just milder, really milder.
